Developing IT in 50 Western Region Universities

In April 2004, Oracle signed a Memorandum of Cooperation with the Department of Higher Education of China's Ministry of Education to support the development of education in China's western regions. From 2004 to 2006, Oracle provided 50 western region universities, each selected by the Ministry of Education, with software products, reference books, courseware, faculty training, and certification. The participating universities are located in Xi'an, Gansu, Ningxia, Qinghai, Xinjiang, Sichuan, Chongqing, Guizhou, Yunnan, Guangxi, Jilin, Tibet, and Inner Mongolia.

Oracle's contribution has accelerated the integration of leading technology into the curriculum of these 50 selected universities and contributed to the development of the software industry in China. Oracle's in-kind donation to the project is worth USD 143 million. More than 15,000 students have learned the leading Oracle technology each year and are now better prepared to develop their careers to meet market demands.

Other CSR efforts in China

- Oracle provides the Internet-based collaborative learning environment, Think.com, to bridge the digital divide in China, to both remote provincial and metropolitan middle and elementary schools with 7,000 to 9,000+ teachers and students in each respective region.
- Oracle provided China's 35 model software colleges with software products, courseware, faculty training, and certification to enable the colleges to upgrade their curriculum and faculty.
- Oracle sponsors Chinese senior vocational school teachers to attend training at the Oracle Academy at the University of California in Los Angeles. These teachers return to China to teach courses on database design and programming with SQL in senior vocational schools to train software workers with industry-ready skills.
